Course

Description

This course is for international undergraduate students majoring in nursing. Participants will reflect on their own experiences in order to provide the basis for interactive communicative learning tasks with a focus on listening, speaking, and vocabulary development. By the end of the course, participants will be able to communicate in most routine nursing situations with relative confidence by engaging in role play scenarios and interacting with Canadian nurses and other guest speakers. Participants will also be able to identify main ideas from a simple listening or text, participate in small group discussions, and deliver a simple presentation to a panel audience.

This course consists of 19 content and language support classes held Monday to Friday. Learn about Canadian culture and nursing practices through a variety of afternoon activities, both indoor and outdoor in and around the capital city of Edmonton.

Course

Description

In today's interconnected world, teachers play a crucial role in shaping the minds of future generations. To prepare students for the challenges and opportunities of a global world, teachers need to build their intercultural skills and perspectives. This course merges the content-based approach of our Communication for Global Citizenship (CSGC) course with essential teacher education competencies, providing participants with the tools to foster inclusive, empathetic, and globally aware classrooms. Classroom activities and tasks will center around components of teacher training in Canada, offering participants insights into Canadian educational practices and frameworks.

This course consists of 19 content and language support classes held Monday to Friday. Learn about Canadian culture and educational practices through a variety of afternoon activities, both indoor and outdoor in and around the capital city of Edmonton.
